

April 2014 Newsletter

The handling of the "Contact Author" button at the bottom of each page has been changed because the old implementation revealed the actual e-mail addresses of the contributors who shared ownership of the record. I apologise for that lack of consideration for your privacy. The new implementation results in a significant change to the behaviour of the sign-on process. In the past after signing on you were taken directly to the top level page of the site. Now the action depends upon whether or not someone has clicked on the "Contact Author" button of any of the individuals that you share responsibility for. If someone has, you will instead be directed to a page containing the note from that person, so you can take appropriate action.

In discussing the improvements to the page for editing a family last month I didn't mention one of the benefits. In the past when you added a new set of parents onto an individual there was no way to add children, that is siblings of the original individual, directly onto that page. That has now been resolved and the two pages work almost identically for all features.

When editing the list of pictures associated with an individual there has always been a button to order them by date, but this did not work because there was no simple way to implement it given the design of the table that I imported from Legacy Family Tree. This month I changed the design of that table to implement this button.

Most of the other work that I have done on the site this month has been on cleaning up the implementation to eliminate various bugs.
